NEUTER THE NARCISSIST

As Donald Trump proves daily what an incompetent, self-serving buffoon he is, the mainstream media (MSM) has joined him in lockstep—like a bad comedy duo. The MSM journalists think they have all the answers, but they need to take a long, hard look in the mirror and realize how they've enabled the rise and triumph of the most ignorant, undeserving President in America's history—yes, even worse than that idiot son of the Bush clan, George W.

It's well known that the MSM gave Trump hugely disproportionate media coverage during the campaign, far more than any other candidate, Democrat or Republican. Trump even said that he felt guilty about spending so little money on advertising compared to his opponents. He didn't have to—he got it all for free! Just blurt out some sensationally stupid, dead-wrong BS or tweet, and the media covered it like it was 9/11.

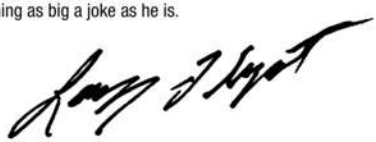

The Donald is a dimwit narcissist who thrives on publicity. At a NATO conference in Brussels back in May, he actually pushed aside the prime minister of Montenegro so he could bask in the limelight with his tough-guy frown, puffing himself up in his best Mussolini impression.

Instead of his daily Twitter storms, Trump should speak directly to the American people. As of July, he had held only one solo press conference, lagging far behind predecessors for the same time period. In that conference he simply refused to answer some reporters' questions, denouncing their organizations as "fake news." Now he has even suggested canceling daily briefings by his press secretary. He's also complained about a "level of hostility" that is "very unfair."

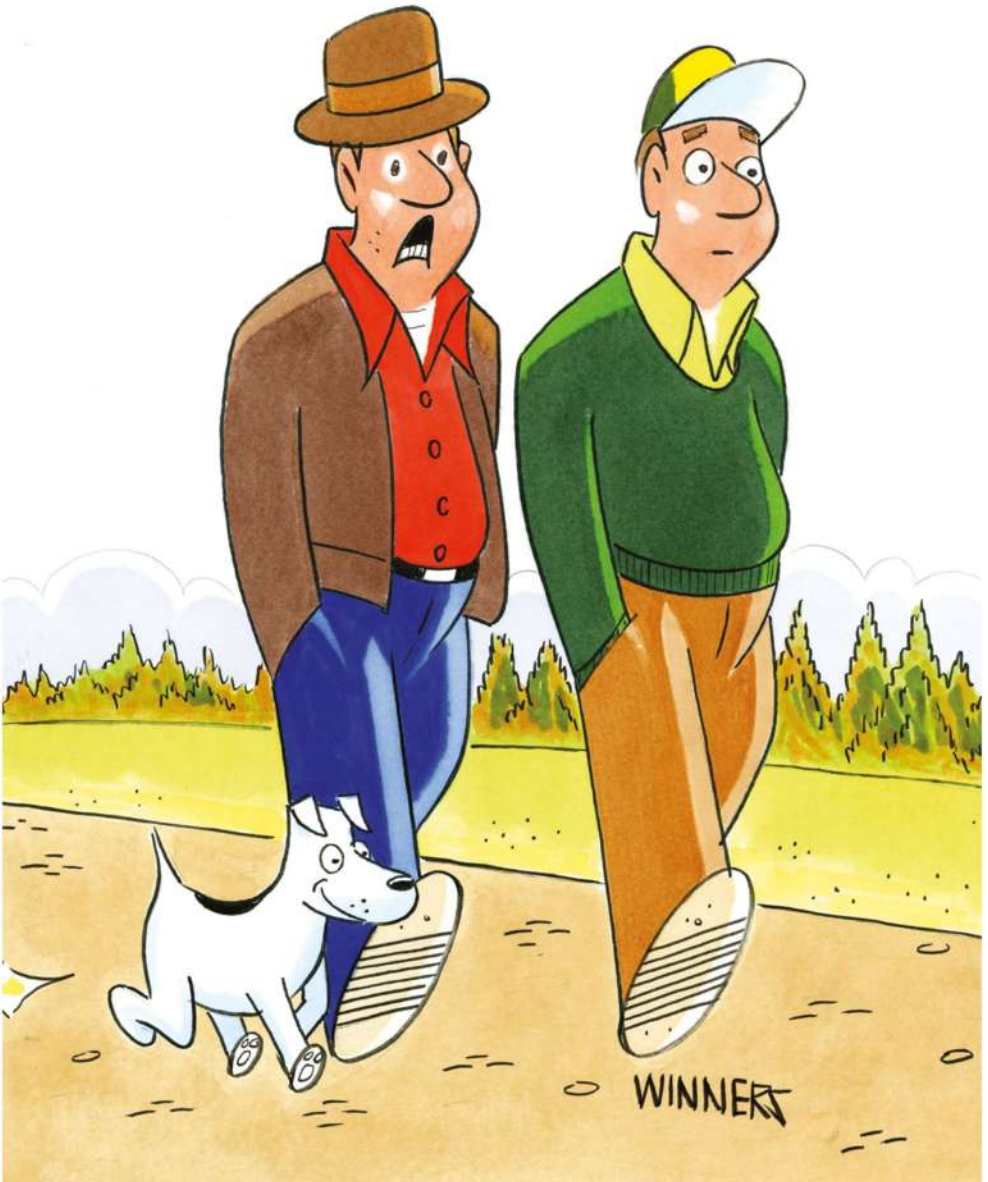

Instead of canceling the press briefings, maybe President Trump should just "cancel lies," in the words of one reporter. Such as stating that "thousands" of people were bused across state lines to vote against him (it didn't happen), or claiming that the national murder rate is the highest in 45 years (actually it's near an all-time low), or insisting that terrorist attacks in Europe are "not even being reported" (total bullshit).

Many Presidents, of course, have been hostile to the press—think Nixon—but none have gone so far as to completely turn a cold shoulder to the First Amendment. For a man who admires dictators and would love to become one himself, a free press will always be an irksome inconvenience.

But the mainstream media needs to be more than just inconvenient. They need to demolish his continuous stream of lies and propaganda and really go after him. If they can't do that with the necessary vigor, then they should starve him of the publicity he thrives on or risk becoming as big a joke as he is.

Well, it turns out he sucks at that too."

ARMING A VILLAIN

PRESIDENT TRUMP'S MEGABUCKS DEAL WITH SAUDI ARABIA WON'T BUY OUR COUNTRY SECURITY.

What's up with Donald Trump and Saudi Arabia? And why has the mainstream media ignored this incredibly cozy connection? Before being elected President, Trump pledged to combat Islamic extremism, and yet he's now sucking up to the very nation that has been its prime spawning ground.

There is still not one substantiated instance of an Islamic terrorist crossing the U.S.-Mexican border to attack anyone in our country. But while Trump continues to yap away about building a wall along the southern border, he has wasted no time in improving relations with the Wahhabi fanatics who rule Saudi Arabia. Fifteen of the nineteen hijackers who flew passenger planes into the World Trade Center towers, the Pentagon and Pennsylvania countryside on September 11, 2001, were traveling on valid Saudi passports.

Saudi Arabia is the major proponent of Wahhabism, a strict, fundamentalist Sunni Islam theology that embraces the notion of war to the end against infidels. These "infidels" include followers of the Shia branch of Islam, which prevails in Iran and U.S.-liberated Iraq, as well as in the part of Saudi Arabia that contains most of the kingdom's vast oil deposits.

Furthermore the Saudi royal family is financing the suppression of Shiites throughout the Middle East. In Syria, Yemen and Bahrain the Saudi leadership has gone so far as to support al-Qaeda and the terrorist group's spin-offs in murdering those who disagree with the Saudi interpretation of the Koran.

Despite these villainous acts, most notably the morally depraved Saudi bombing of much of Yemen—one of the wealthiest nations in the region bombing the poorest—President Trump visited Saudi Arabia to ink a $110-billion arms sales to the perpetrators of that genocide. Key to the deal was Trump endorsing the Saudi viewpoint that Iran is the primary terrorist menace, in the process undermining the nuclear agreement that his predecessor, Barack Obama, and other world leaders had signed with the Islamic republic.

Life in Iran is no picnic, but moderate forces are contending for power, and they were strengthened by Obama's diplomacy and an easing of sanctions. It is also true that the Iran-backed, Shiite-dominated government in Iraq has been a vigorous opponent of ISIS and other manifestations of Sunni fanaticism. Meanwhile Saudi Arabia has long fostered an extremist Sunni crusade mentality, beginning with early financial support from the kingdom's elite to Osama bin Laden, the mastermind of the 9/11 attacks.

Trump's siding with Saudi Arabia, which believes that a religious war with Shiites is justified, emboldened King Salman. The octogenarian ruler seized the opportunity to name his hardline anti-Iran son as his successor to the throne. As defense minister, Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, 31, has overseen the Saudi-led campaign against Houthi rebels in Yemen and the relentless bombing of civilian targets. He has also publicly trumpeted "taking the battle" to Iran and has backed Sunni extremist groups in Syria identified with al-Qaeda affiliates.

Trump is not the first U.S. President to play up to the Saudis, of course. In the hours after 9/11, when there was a nationwide flight ban, George W. Bush spirited members of the Saudi royal family out of the United States, shielding them from any investigation of the kingdom's role in the skyjackings. Unfortunately Trump is all about making deals without even a pretense of rational foreign policy.

For example, the President had his son-in-law Jared Kushner on the phone with the chief executive of Lockheed Martin to get the company to sweeten part of the arms deal. But a good deal for Saudi Arabia and U.S. defense-industry contractors all too often has been a lousy deal when it comes to protecting the security of the American people.

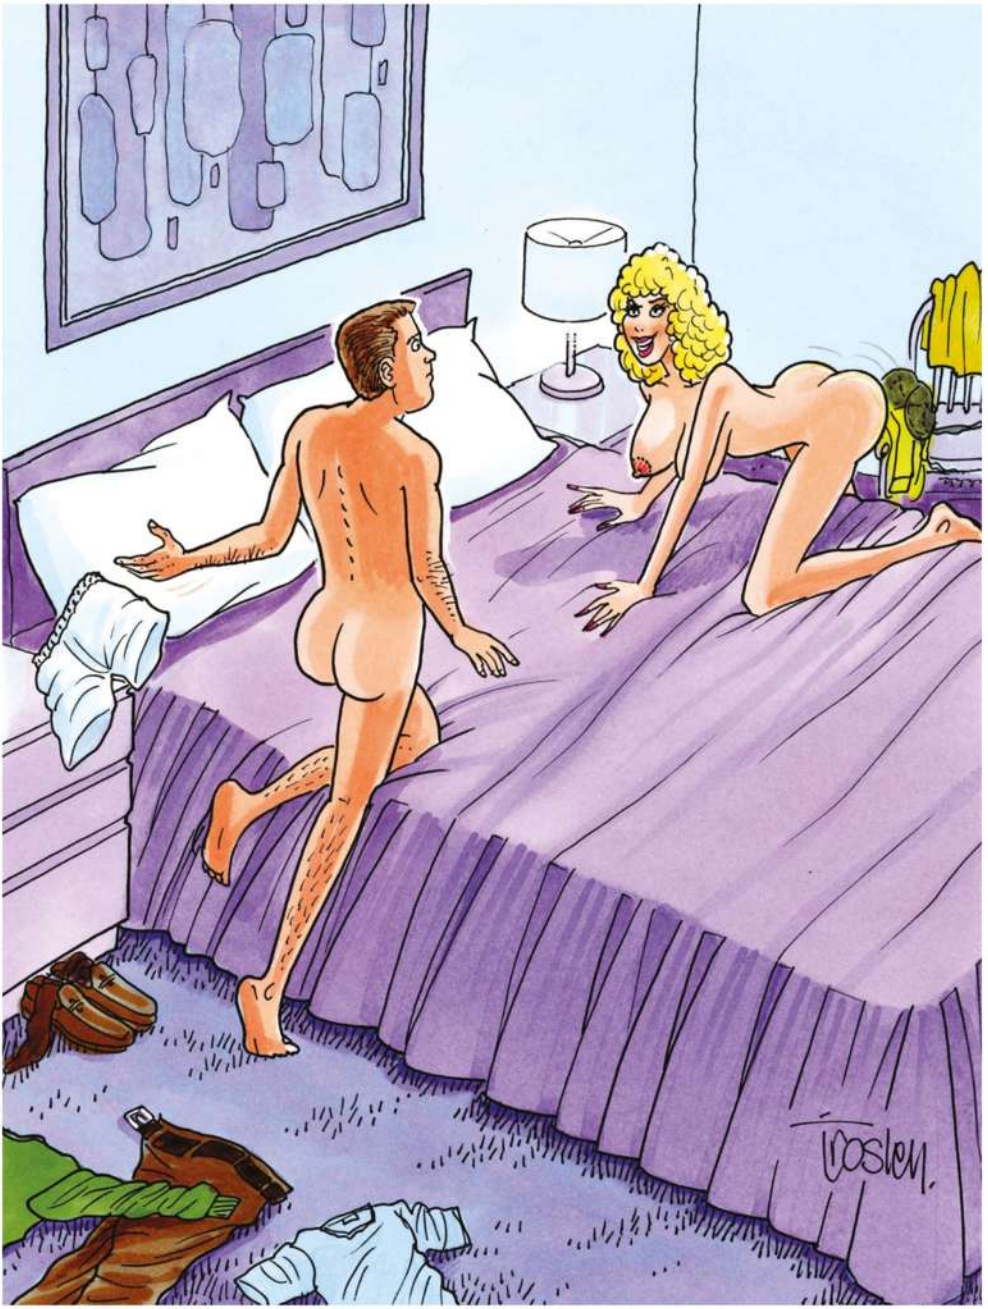

There is simply no serious way of combating terrorism without confronting the Saudi theocracy, which has relied on a fanatical interpretation of Islam and a staggering amount of black gold to maintain its stranglehold on power. And that is how its rulers amassed ungodly opulence in the sea of destitution that defines most of the Islamic nations in the Persian Gulf region.

The prime contradiction of U.S. policy in the Middle East has long been focusing on potential oil profits at the expense of basic human rights. But it was none other than billionaire Donald Trump who finally bared the obscenity of our country's skewed priorities. H

WATERGATE PALES IN COMPARISON

DEMOCRATS MUST DEMAND THAT THE PRESIDENT BE HELD ACCOUNTABLE FOR HIS ACTIONS.

I rise today, Mr. Speaker, to call for the impeachment of the President of the United States of America!" Representative Al Green (D-Texas) was a lonely voice on the floor of the U.S. House on May 17 as he demanded accountability for obstruction of justice by Donald Trump. Green accused the President of acting "above the law" by firing FBI Director James Comey, who was heading the probe into Team Trump's alleged coordination with Russians during the 2016 election campaign. It's remarkable that Green was the only House Democrat taking such a stand.

Later that same day, Senator John McCain (R-Arizona) was asked about the innumerable scandals plaguing the Trump Administration. "It's reaching a point where it's of Watergate size and scale," McCain said at the International Republican Institute's Freedom Awards dinner. The onslaught of Trump bombshells reminded the GOP's 2008 Presidential nominee of the scandal that brought down Richard Nixon. "I think we've seen this movie before…," McCain lamented. "This is not good for America."

In early June, addressing the National Press Club in Australia, James Clapper also cited Watergate with regard to the Trump tumult. "…Watergate pales, really, in my view, compared to what we're confronting now," said Clapper, a top-level official in the intelligence community under the three previous Presidents.

Thanks to the bungled break-in at the Democratic National Committee's headquarters and subsequent coverup, Nixon was accused of obstruction of justice, abuse of power and contempt of Congress. But he resigned in 1974 because it was inevitable that the U.S. House of Representatives would vote to approve the Articles of Impeachment.

Many people mistakenly equate impeachment with the automatic removal of a President from office. It's just the first step toward a trial in the U.S. Senate, where the President must be found guilty by at least two-thirds of the members to be ousted. Impeachment is merely a Congressional inquiry into matters believed to involve "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

Impeachment was conceived by our founders as one of the legislative branch's checks on executive power, or abuse of that power, as the case may be. "Impeachment is a political act, not a legal act," The Nation magazine's John Nichols, a renowned progressive journalist and outspoken critic of the Democratic Party, told me.

Congress, he added, doesn't need to wait for the findings of Special Counsel Robert Mueller, who was tapped to head the Justice Department's investigation of Comey's extraordinary dismissal by the President. "In fact, it shouldn't wait," Nichols argued. Congress needs to take action now, "rather than to allow the office of the Presidency to be polluted, to be undermined, to be warped in a way that might harm the country."

By mid-June, despite the ever-growing crisis, most House Republicans continued to make excuses for Trump or simply looked the other way. Most Democrats expressed outrage, but did little more, just as their Congressional leadership had during the Presidency of George W. Bush, whose Republican administration was tainted by then-unprecedented and unending scandals.

Nichols advised, "We ought to stop fetishizing the impeachment power and start recognizing that it is a tool of governance that was established to make government work better. Not to create a Constitutional crisis, but to address the potential of a Constitutional crisis. When you take it off the table, as so many Democratic leaders have suggested we should, you really disarm."

Shying away from demanding accountability is also politically perilous for Democrats. "People will say, 'Gosh, you keep telling us that this guy is the most dangerous, most horrible commander in chief in history…but you're not going to do anything about it?'" Nichols said. "Why? Because you think maybe you can get political advantage out of this?"

One could argue that this strategy worked for the Dems under Bush. In 2006 they swept to majorities in the House and Senate. In 2008 they took back the White House, but chose to hold no one accountable, opting to "look forward, not back."

As a result, the Democrats unwittingly paved the way for the return of the Republicans, who took over statehouses across the country and regained GOP majorities in both chambers of Congress before ultimately retaking the White House. No one was ever held accountable for the very travesties—torture, illegal wars, banking deregulation—that Trump championed during his campaign. Many of the disasters of the Bush years returned, this time on Fox News-fueled and Koch Brothers-funded steroids.

"If Democrats are serious about politics, they have to be serious about accountability," Nichols concluded. It seems simple enough. Democrats need to become the Accountability Party. It would be good for them politically and good for us as a nation. A mid-May Public Policy Polling survey found that 48% of voters supported the impeachment of Donald Trump. Things have gotten far worse since then.

"Obstruction of justice by the President is the problem," Representative Green told reporters after his lonely House-floor speech. "Impeachment by Congress is the solution."

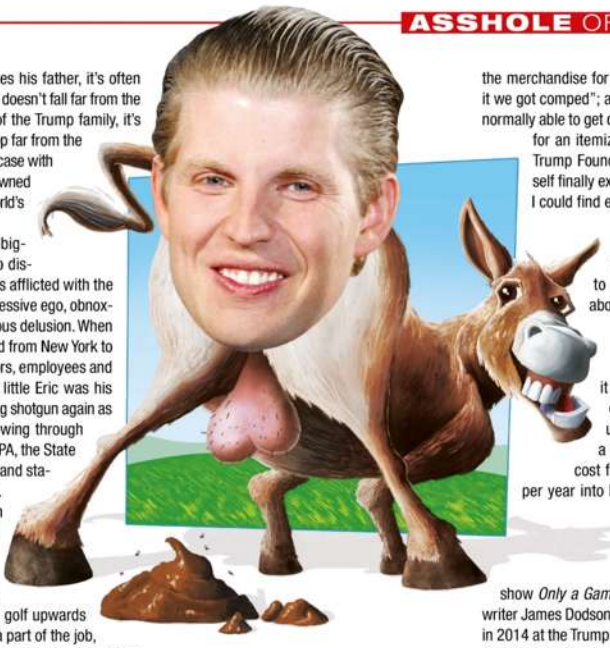

Someone needs to tell his fellow Democrats. H

ERIC TRUMP

When a son emulates his father, it's often said that the apple doesn't fall far from the tree. In the case of the Trump family, it's more like the turds don't plop far from the Asshole. That's certainly the case with Eric Trump, the third turd spawned by Donald Trump, now the world's reigning king of Assholes.

Eric is the President's biggest supporter, brooking no dissent against Big Daddy. He's afflicted with the very same syndrome of excessive ego, obnoxious arrogance and dangerous delusion. When Trump was riding roughshod from New York to Florida, swindling contractors, employees and Trump University students, little Eric was his sidekick. Now the boy's riding shotgun again as Big Daddy goes global, plowing through affordable healthcare, the EPA, the State Department, the free press and stable relations with our allies.

Excluding meetings with foreign leaders, President Trump has held only one press conference since his inauguration in January, but he's found the time to play golf upwards of 30 times. This is all just a part of the job, according to Eric, who states that "I think being able to go to Mar-a-Lago, it is my father's Crawford, Texas."

Crawford Ranch, of course, was where the smirking chimp named George W. Bush played cowboy and spent most of his time prior to 9/11, chainsawing brush while ignoring explicit warnings about bin Laden's plans to strike the U.S. Holy shit, did Eric just equate Big Daddy to Dubya, now regarded by most historians as the absolute worst fuckup of a President in American history? But Bush Jr. is not the only role model Eric cites for his father: He once described Big Daddy as a "supergenius in a very, very practical way" and compared him to Winston Churchill! If there is ever an earthquake in England, we can be sure it's caused by Winston spinning in his grave like a nuclear centrifuge!

With his slicked-back blond hair, pursed lips and nose-in-the-air attitude, Eric looks the epitome of an Asshole—the kind of privileged, better-than-thou rich frat boy that anyone who got up in the world by his own bootstraps would just love to punch. Trump's German ancestors even have a word for it: Backpfeifengesicht, meaning a "face begging to be slapped." Bill Maher has aptly named the Trump spawn "Thurston Shitbag the Third."

For over ten years now he has sponsored the Eric Trump Foundation Golf Invitational at the Trump National Golf Club in Westchester County, New York, with all the proceeds supposedly going to fund cancer research at the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis. The best thing, according to Eric, is that because the golf tournament is held on family property for free, there's little cost and so all the money goes to St. Jude's. "We get to use our assets 100% free of charge," he told Forbes.

But in reviewing filings from the Eric Trump Foundation and other charities, Forbes discovered differently: "It's clear that the course wasn't free—that the Trump Organization received payments for its use, part of more than $1.2 million that has no documented recipients past the Trump Organization. Golf charity experts say the listed expenses defy any reasonable cost justification for a one-day golf tournament.

"Additionally, the Donald J. Trump Foundation, which has come under previous scrutiny for self-dealing and advancing the interests of its namesake rather than those of charity, apparently used the Eric Trump Foundation to funnel $100,000 in donations into revenue for the Trump Organization." Further, more than $500,000 was re-donated to other charities connected to Trump family members or interests, which seems to violate federal and state tax laws against self-dealing and deceiving donors.

The total expenses for the tournament averaged around $50,000 through 2010, but they tripled in 2011 to $142,000. That's when Donald Sr. found out about all the comped expenses and "had a cow," according to Ian Gillule, former membership and marketing director for the Trump National Westchester golf course. "He flipped… He said, 'I don't care if it's my son or not—everybody gets billed.'"

By 2015 the listed costs had bloated to $322,000. Yet Eric proclaimed that all the expenses were covered: the golf course, "always comped"; the merchandise for golfers, "the vast majority of it we got comped"; and "things like wine we were normally able to get donated." When Forbes asked for an itemized list of expenses, the Eric Trump Foundation balked, with Eric himself finally explaining: "I'm sure if I hunted, I could find examples of expenses associated with the charity that aren't due to day-of activities. But I would probably have to think pretty long and hard about that."

Well, thinking "long and hard" is not something the Trumps are noted for, and it would probably take Eric a decade of brain strain to come up with a plausible excuse for a charity event billed as a no-cost freebie channeling six figures per year into his father's for-profit organization. Good luck with that, Asshole.

The truth will always bear out, as it did on the radio show Only a Game back in May, when sportswriter James Dodson recalled playing golf with Eric in 2014 at the Trump National Charlotte course. He asked Eric how Trump could afford to upkeep all his golf assets after the Great Recession, when banks had stopped funding golf course development. According to Dodson, "He said, 'Well, we don't rely on American banks. We have all the funding we need out of Russia.'"

Yowza! With all the ongoing investigations of Trump and his associates' secret ties to Russia, that's not just a cat out of the bag; it's a whole goddamn pride of lions out of the cage. Of course, Eric disavows the story, calling it "complete garbage" and insisting that "We have zero ties to Russian investors." But James Dodson stands by his story: His memory is "very clear," and "That's what Eric said to me. Absolutely. That's the long and short of it, I'm afraid."

Want further proof of Thurston Shitbag the Third's grade-A assholery? Here's how he defended Big Daddy's love of torture in an interview with Greta Van Susteren on Fox News: "You see these terrorists that are flying planes into buildings, right?... And then somebody complains when a terrorist gets waterboarded, which quite frankly is no different than what happens on college campuses and frat houses every day."

Really? Sure, frat boys like Eric have been known to drown in alcohol, but they do it voluntarily. And it is definitely not the same kind of torture that we hanged Japanese soldiers for after WWII. John McCain, Jesse Ventura and even General Mattis agree that waterboarding is torture and is effective only for eliciting false confessions. But we'd love for Eric to be on the receiving end of such treatment and demonstrate how harmless it really is. We'd be happy to donate the shackles and buckets of water, Asshole. H

LITTLE PRICK—BIG DICK

What would it take for you to let someone stick a needle in your dick? Money? Beachfront property? How about the simple prospect of an erect penis?

For men afflicted by the scourge of erectile dysfunction, one tiny prick is making huge waves. As reported by The Sun in the U.K., a recent study published in The Journal of Sexual Medicine suggests how injections of onabotulinum toxin A, also known as Botox, could help transform soft peckers into hard-as-rock cocks.

The drug, a neurotoxin, "works by weakening muscles and nerves," writes Sun digital health editor Lizzie Parry. Experts believe Botox, typically known for its antiwrinkle applications, can help smooth muscle tissue relax. This in turn would increase blood flow to the wang and help maintain a hard-on. Unlike expensive boner drugs, one injection could be effective for months. That said, the treatment is not without its risks. Side effects include "flu-like symptoms, bruising, temporary weakness," as well as the body's increased resistance to the drug over time.

But if you do suffer from ED, take a close look at your lifestyle first: Are you overweight? A smoker? Heavy drinker? Maybe you don't exercise often enough or have a high-stress job? These are all contributing factors to ED. Until science gives us a pill or injection that can cure our shitty lives, take better care of yourself—if only to fuck over the drug companies.

FAP TO THE FUTURE

Porn lovers, our prayers have finally been answered—no longer must we lay our dignity on the line to masturbate in front of the computer screen. Relax and enjoy your wank without the constant fear of someone walking in on you, because minimeyes has your back.

As reported by Mashable, minimeyes is a motion sensor that uses Bluetooth technology to shut all open windows and mute any sound if it detects an intrusion. It has a range of 16.4 feet and uses "a passive infrared lens to monitor the room." It also works with mobile devices, closing the app you're using (Android) or displaying a notification accompanied by an audio alert (iOS).

Imagine: You're 20 minutes into an Asa Akira orgy when the door opens. Before minimeyes, you would have to simultaneously contend with sound, a browser or your media player, conceal your junk and look nonchalant, all at once. To say that it's a game-changer is the understatement of the year.

It was developed by Dutch inventor Moos Neimeijer, who launched an Indiegogo campaign in partnership with adult tube site xHamster. As of press time they had only raised $1,013, just 1% of their $96,000 goal, but all big things have small beginnings, right?

The plan is to deliver by the end of the year. Get in on the ground floor and take advantage of cool perks packages, including 8GB of free porn! You can watch the hilarious animated promo video on YouTube by searching minimeyes.

THEY'RE COMING IN AMERICA

In these troubling times of border walls and travel bans, what better way to show your support for immigrants than by welcoming one into your bed?

So suggests Kumail Nanjiani, better known as a screenwriter and one of the stars of HBO's Silicon Valley. Delivering the commencement address last May at Iowa's Grinnell College, his alma mater, Nanjiani—who is of Pakistani descent—encouraged the leaders of tomorrow to "have sex with an immigrant."

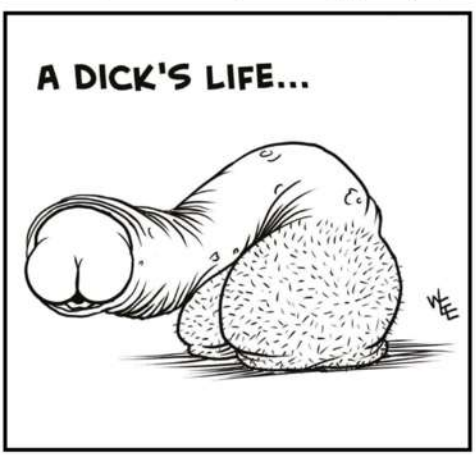

"We're going through a tough time right now, and it would just be really great for morale," he joked.

But is it possible he's on to something? Data on immigrants and sex is scant at best, but we know enough about demographics to grasp the importance of intercultural boning. For starters, it's a fact that immigrants and their descendants will drive U.S. population growth over the next half century. According to the nerds at Pew Research Center, this will transform the U.S. into a country with "no racial or ethnic group as its majority."

Pew projects that by 2065, there will be 78 million immigrants, a record 18% foreign-born. Currently the foreign-born population in the U.S. is 14%, or 45 million. "Without immigrants the U.S. population would start decreasing," informs Pew demographer Jeff Passel.

So if you hate America, please—by all means—continue dating within your own homogeneous ethnic circles. True patriots understand: It's your duty to tap that foreign booty.

"My fellow Americans, we are and always will be a nation of immigrants. We were strangers once too." —BARACK OBAMA, FORMER U.S. PRESIDENT

"You got problems? My roommates are nuts, my neighbor is an asshole, and my best friend is a pussy."

"Sally just had an orgasm, I want one."

THE REAL FAKE NEWS: PILLORY HILLARY?

It's been nearly a year since President Clinton was lected to office by a landslide in both the popular vote and Electoral College. Her victory came easy after the FBI found strong evidence of Russian collusion on the part of Donald Trump last October, leaving Hillary to run against GOP running mate Mike Pence. But now the first female President might be facing a scandal of her own. Sure, in the first year in office she has managed to fix healthcare, diffuse the Syrian crisis and even unseat Putin from power, but this emerging fracas in Madame President's White House might well be a black mark on her record. We don't have all the details, but apparently—and remember, the facts might change as we know more—President Clinton took too long to put her hand on her heart during the national anthem.

Video from the 2017 All-Star Game shows that the President didn't immediately have her hand on her heart as our nation's most treasured song played. In the footage, which has been broken down frame by frame by Sean Hannity, it shows that her hand was just ascending as she began to sing the "Oh" of "Oh, say can you see…" It is even possible that her hand wasn't exactly over her heart until the word "say."

Whether or not this hurts her 90% approval rating remains to be seen. America is still very happy with her work reconciling Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie. Meanwhile Republicans are already screaming about impeachment over her brief lapse in judgement. Vice President Kaine spoke up about the issue while inaugurating the new "JFK Settlement" on the Moon, stating, quote, "Are you kidding me?" Meanwhile Madam President has not addressed the issue, maybe because she has been busy allocating the recent budget surplus to all the newly built bridges to Mexico and the Florida detachment project. We can only hope we as a country can move on from this and learn. More as this scandal develops.

ISIS CRISIS

ISIS was plunged into disarray today after a leading Muslim cleric announced that martyrs dying for Allah will not be rewarded with 72 virgins, but with just one 72-year-old virgin. According to the Akhand of Swat, known widely as "the Sage of Istanbul," previous Islamic scholars got the Koran wrong, fatally misreading "72-year-old virgins (peace be upon them)" as "72 virgins (peace be upon them)." The new ruling will take effect immediately. The 72-year-old virgins will be selected from among several million heavenly brides accumulated over the centuries. Untouched by human hand for millennia, many are said to be looking forward like crazy to finally getting laid.

Following the Akhand's announcement, wailings and gnashings of teeth were heard among the Islamic faithful. Thousands of militants threw down their guns and sarin gas containers and began despondently heading home. "The Sage has taken all the fun out of dying," lamented one distraught terrorist, bursting into tears. "I might as well live peacefully with my wife and 17 kids."

The "ISIS crisis," as it has come to be known, has spread to al-Qaeda and even to the Syrian army, threatening the stability of the Assad regime. Talks with Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini have been urgently requested to see if the old ruling can be restored. "Otherwise we're all doomed," said Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, leader of ISIS. "Allah be praised."

MISTY LOVELACE

VIEW TO A THRILL

PHOTOGRAPHY BY VICTOR LIGHTWORSHIP

My first experience with HUSTLER was when I was on the Barely Legal August 2016 cover. It was an honor to be chosen, and I love modeling. I enjoy being in front of the camera and behind it, so it excites me to go to beautiful places to shoot! I'm passionate about travel, and one day I hope to fill my life with all the pictures of my adventures.

"My wildest sexual encounter was when I was eaten out on a train. There was something dangerous about having my legs spread and pussy out to be tasted in a public space. Anyone could have seen us, and that made it so exciting."

CAME

IF MONOGAMY WORKS, WHY IS THE DIVORCE RATE PUSHING 50%? TODAY ENJOYING A RELATIONSHIP WITH MULTIPLE PARTNERS IS MORE ACCEPTED THAN EVER. IT'S CALLED POLYAMORY, AND IT PROMISES LOVE WITHOUT LIMITS.

BY JOHN BLAYLOCK

It was morning, and Denise was looking forward to the sublime satisfaction of daytime sex. Her naked body was entangled with her boyfriend's in bed when suddenly she heard the sound of a key unlocking the front door.

"It was my first time with my first poly boyfriend. We were about to have sex. We kind of jumped, scrambling to get sheets over us. Then he said, 'It's okay—it's just my wife!' You'd think this would be cause for panic, but no one got trapped in the closet that day.

"His wife came in and was apologizing; she forgot some stuff that she needed for work. So I met my first poly boyfriend's wife while I was in bed with him, naked. I shook her hand, thinking, This is my life now! Then we all went out for breakfast." >>

Polyamory—or simply poly to those who practice ethical nonmonogamy—means "many loves." What makes it so radical, so other, is that it challenges everything we're taught and conditioned to feel about romance and love: that there is one person out there for each of us and that love outside the confines of monogamy is wrong.

"I think that we're culturally conditioned toward monogamy. But I don't think we're hardwired for it," says sex coach and polyamorist Leigh Montavon. "Everything in the world at large is set up to benefit monogamous people—there is one person out there for you, and when you find that person, you've won the lottery. The idea is that you're supposed to want to get married, and there are incentives: tax breaks, shared health insurance—you get the illusion of safety with long-term relationships."

For many that illusion of safety is enough. For others, like Denise and Leigh, polyamory offers a more realistic approach to love and dating. Polyamory is deeply rooted in the virtues of honesty, safety, respect and openness. It is a constant dialogue and considerable work, especially the honesty part. But for those living a polyamorous lifestyle, the payoff—happiness and fulfillment—is worth it.

LEIGH MONTAVON

SEX COACH
YourSexualRevolution.com

Leigh Montavon is a big Nina Hartley fan. The beloved adult entertainment legend is a sex-positive feminist who combines the importance of pleasure with the necessity of good, accurate sex education. As a certified sex coach and clinical sexologist, Leigh—like Hartley—wants to help people by accepting them as they are, without fear or judgment.

She is an active member of an extremely private Los Angeles-based polyamory Facebook group, whose 800-plus members enjoy everything from monthly potluck dinners to workshops and weekend retreats. Like most who are accepted into the group, Leigh's introduction was through a friend, back when critical mass was 15 or 20 members. Today their monthly get-togethers attract upward of 100 people. Topics of discussion range from online dating to consent culture to how to come out as polyamorous to your kids. Leigh even leads a women's workshop.

More people, of course, means more opportunities for new experiences, like break-off groups, guest speakers and even a recent retreat—their first and an unmitigated success. "Hot tubs, workshops—people seemed to love it, and it will definitely happen again."

Hold up—hot tubs? Don't be misled by outdated clichés that went the way of Nixon and suburban key parties. Yes, swingers and swinging are still a thing, but polyamory is not swinging, and Leigh knows the difference because she's lived both lifestyles.

"I'm divorced, but my ex and I were involved in swinging for several years," she begins. "I think it's important to point out that very few poly people consider themselves to be swingers. I wouldn't go so far as to say poly people look down on swinging, but there is definitely a different philosophy on sex and relationships."

The main difference is that swinging is primarily about recreational sex—married couples seek out other married couples, fun is had, and everyone returns to their daily lives. And while connections can occur over the course of a sexual relationship, the marriage holds primacy over all else. A swinger has sex outside of marriage, but you don't fall in love—or so it goes.

Polyamory, on the other hand, encourages nonmonogamous, consensual and open, honest relationships with multiple partners. It dares challenge the notion that we're only meant to be with one person and proposes instead that love is not binary, not black and white, but something to be shared. Polyamorous people recognize their capacity for loving more than one person—which is not to say they don't have casual sex.

After her divorce, Leigh threw herself into online dating. The more she encountered polyamory, the more she learned, until she felt certain it was the right fit for her. A self-described "relationship nerd," she had finally found her niche.

"I don't believe that one person can meet all of my needs, or that the joys and sorrows and everything that goes along with relationships should be so limited." Polyamory, she continues, offers a "nice in-between place, where you're just as likely to meet someone at a party for a one-night stand as you are to meet a potential new partner."

Those kinds of opportunities, says Leigh, are what drew her to poly. "There's the space for that, and it doesn't change whether you're single, in a relationship or in multiple relationships. That part of it is really freeing—I can have deeper emotional connections with other people, which can be sexual or romantic, but also not sexual or even close friendships."

Leigh says she tends to date people who have a lot in common with each other—not on purpose, but it's definitely been the pattern, particularly with men. So when a friend was looking for someone to help on an independent film, it dawned on her that she could probably put together an entire crew with just the people she had dated or slept with in the last few months. "There was someone in lighting, someone in visual effects, an editor, a director, a photographer, a writer. No actors though. That's where I draw the line!"

Her primary partner, Greg, doesn't work in the film industry, but he's in video games, so she hasn't strayed too far afield. From the moment they met, via OkCupid, Leigh and Greg were on the same page. But what about jealousy? Surely insecurity gets the best of us in the end, polyamorous or not.

"I think jealousy is the thing you'll hear people mention most when they find out about any kind of ethical nonmonogamy or polyamory," explains Leigh. "They say, 'I could never do it because I'm too jealous.'

"I DON'T BELIEVE THAT ONE PERSON CAN MEET ALL OF MY NEEDS, OR THAT THE JOYS AND SORROWS AND EVERYTHING THAT GOES ALONG WITH RELATIONSHIPS SHOULD BE SO LIMITED."

And I really believe that jealousy is a feeling, not a personality trait. I experience jealousy; my partner experiences jealousy. Most people do." It's what you do with that feeling and how you articulate it that defines the relationship. "He's my best friend, so if I'm excited about someone I'm dating, he's going to be the first to know and vice versa. A good poly word is compersion—which essentially means finding joy in the happiness of someone you love. I guess it's the direct opposite of jealousy."

The real challenge, the hardest part of being poly, says Leigh, is time management, not jealousy.

"Love is infinite. Time is not."

PHIL & CAROL

POLY POWER

As couples go, Phil and Carol are about as cool as they come (their names have been changed for this article). Theirs is a love story for the postmodern era: Anxious, depressive teens meet in high school, and a mutual love of alternative comics and grunge rock sparks a deep friendship, which turns into love. They're hot, delightfully nerdy, mad talented and polyamorous until the end of time.

Together for 13 years, married for six and poly since 2013, they've run their own business since high school and work from home, which can be isolating. The Facebook group—Carol's discovery—helps them stay connected and plugged into the community.

Phil and Carol both identify as queer and are each other's primary partner. They date other people, have sex with other people and enjoy loving relationships outside of their marriage. They are fun, funny, goofy and irrepressibly affectionate toward one another. One thing they are not is selfish. "The people we engage with—if that has the potential to go on to love, we don't limit that when it happens," says Phil. Carol gleefully chimes in, "We're kind of down for whatever!" Phil readily agrees, "If someone's hot, let's boogie!"

Best buds since high school (Carol's Lenore comic book–themed lunch box caught Phil's eye in the hallway one fateful day), they have always felt the pull of poly. But Phil was hesitant at first about opening up their relationship. "A lot of it was my issues with not feeling confident," he admits. "My jealously has since eroded, and that feels awesome. I'm a lot more confident these days."

Likewise Carol is not immune to the twangs of insecurity. She says it helps to maintain open lines of communication with a healthy side of empathy. "We've definitely both gone through periods where it's like, 'You're talking with so-and-so too much.'" Translation: "'I miss you—you should hang out with me.' It's about communicating those points while also being clear about your own needs."

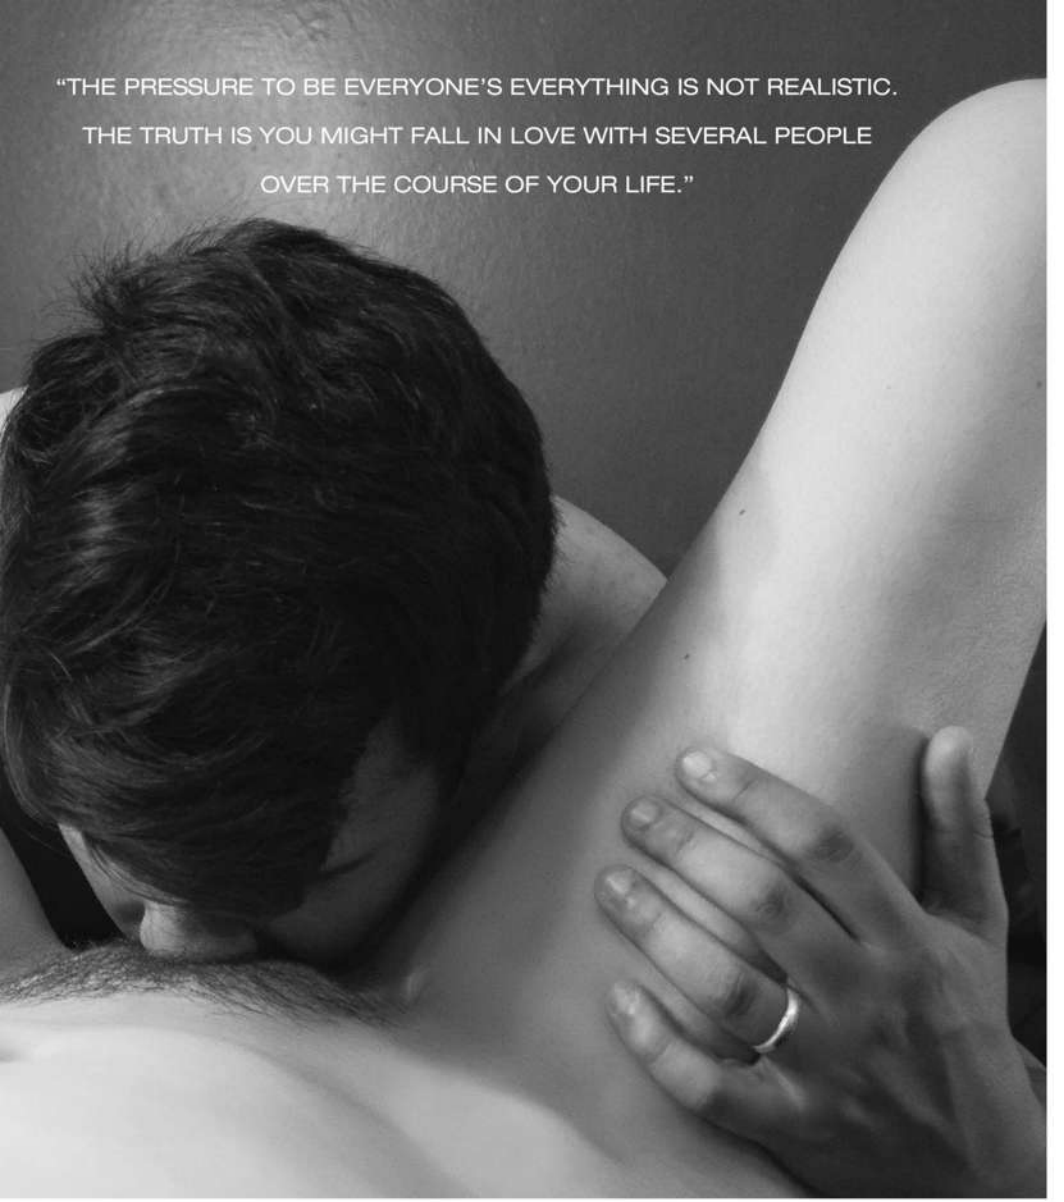

It's a lifestyle defined as much by shared desires as the rhythm of daily life. Carol, for instance, is a workaholic who travels a lot, sometimes with friends—friends she enjoys having sex with. "I have a tendency to sleep with pals. I have two that I sleep with on a semiregular basis. I developed really close friendships with these people, and I turned to Phil in both instances and said, 'Hey, can I sleep with this person?' And after some hemming and hawing, he said, 'Yeah, I suppose that's fine.'" In fact, it was so fine that Phil's enjoyed a threesome with one of the friends.

First and foremost, the couple upholds the virtues of consideration and common sense. "The first rule for everything is always be safe," Phil insists. "Also, I'm not going to host here if Carol is home, and if I do host here when she's gone, I'm going to wash the sheets before she comes back. Just try to be considerate."

It may seem a contradiction, but polyamory really did bring Carol and Phil closer together. They see themselves as living a better life outside of monogamy's rigid code.

"I think it helped with respect to relationship expectations," says Carol. "Because I'm not expecting [him] to fulfill every single little thing—that's an unfair expectation emotionally. The same can be said for friends in general; it's good to have an emotional support network. I think that I've found it more in this community than previously with friends and family."

"The pressure to be everyone's everything is not realistic," adds Phil. "People have that fairy tale, but the truth is you might fall in love with several people over the course of your life."

Phil's current relationship goal? "More threesomes!" >>

"I THOUGHT IT WAS SO WONDERFUL, THAT PEOPLE COULD BE OPEN AND HONEST AND COMMUNICATE ABOUT THESE THINGS, AS OPPOSED TO WAITING FOR THE OTHER PERSON TO CHEAT ON THEM."

DENISE LANGONE

L.A. WOMAN
SexSafariPodcast.com

Denise Langone, who identifies as pansexual (attracted to others regardless of gender identity or biological sex), is currently in the enviable situation of dating two people who already have primary partners. She is "the other woman." At first glance it may seem like she's always getting the short end of the stick; but being polyamorous, the scenario has its perks.

"I find myself in relationships with people who already have primaries," she begins. "I have a core partner who is married, and his wife and I are good friends. I didn't look for it; it just kind of happened that way. It's kind of a sweet spot to be in—I get to spend some amazing quality time with my boyfriend, but I don't have to talk about doing the dishes or who's paying the bills or any of that domestic stuff. We just have wonderful quality time with one another."

Here's the real brain-buster: Denise's two male partners are buddies. No joke. "My mind was blown the first time they were in a room together," she beams. "It's so wonderful that both of my partners can spend time with each other. If one of them has a date with another woman, then we can go out on a double date. It's really nice to see two men who I care about show love and respect to one another. There's no machismo—all of that goes out the door."

Denise lives life openly with her friends, family and coworkers. She joined the Facebook group three years ago and speaks fondly of her chosen family. "I'm really happy having found these people. They're pretty awesome."

Before finding polyamory, Denise describes being plagued by uncertainty. "I just felt I was the world's worst monogamist. I could never get it right; something was always missing. It wasn't missing in the other person; it was something missing within me that I couldn't quite understand."

Then about four years ago Denise entered a relationship where right at the outset they discussed the possibility of being open in some capacity, but without any idea of what that meant exactly.

As fate would have it, they happened upon a reality TV show—it was about polyamory (Showtime's Polyamory: Married & Dating), and by the end of the episode everything had changed. "The light bulb went off for both of us. We just looked at each other and were like, 'Oh, my God, this is what we both want.' I thought it was so wonderful, that people could be open and honest and communicate about these things, as opposed to waiting for the other person to cheat on them."

She took her time, but once Denise finally went on that first date, the fear was gone, and the floodgates opened. "I came home and was immediately like, 'Please go out on a date—you need to have fun too. This is so great, and I can't be the only one to be experiencing this.' From then on it was wonderful; I was so happy to have ripped the Band-Aid off." Going first also tempered her jealousy. Now she wanted her partner to experience what she was feeling.

Part of the thrill, she explains, is something known in polyamory circles as NRE—new relationship energy. "It's the butterflies and excitement when someone new comes into your life. That's the other great part of polyamory: we get to continually experience that over and over again with new people."

The first sleepover sex was similarly enthralling. "That was like, Okay, well, this is happening! There's no going back now. And it was fantastic; it was a wonderful experience, and the next morning when I came home, I was even more in love with my fiancé."

Their engagement eventually ended, but Denise credits polyamory for how close they remain to this day. Now she wants to help others find their way as cofounder and cohost of Sex Safari, a sex-positive podcast she playfully describes as "a little bit South Park and a little bit NPR."

"I want to try and help people navigate sexuality, relationships and dating, and the podcast is my way of showing others that [polyamory] is an option among the many choices you have."

She even goes so far as to suggest that the poly approach to relationships would be healthy for monogamous people as well. "I think taking the fear out of communication is great. We're allowed to feel happy and sad, and we're also allowed to feel jealous. What you do with those feelings is what makes or breaks the act of communication. A lot of people think all of this talking and compromising is exhausting, but it's some of the most rewarding communication and work I've ever done in relationships." H

POLY 101: TIPS FOR BEGINNERS

How to meet other poly people. "It's the internet. If you're going more the swinger route, then there are specific lifestyle websites that have a little more of a sex bent to them; there's Adult FriendFinder, stuff like that. But once someone starts exploring nonmonogamy, I think [poly] has become a lot more mainstream in online spaces. Even OkCupid has a space to say whether you're in a monogamous or nonmonogamous relationship. It also allows for people who are part of a couple to link their accounts to each other." —Leigh Montavon

Sign on the dotted line. It's normal to be cautious, and agreements can be a safety net as you feel each other out. "When people open up their relationships, they generally make agreements. 'We can go on dates with people, but partners are allowed to make requests.' 'No sex on first dates.' Or, 'Before you have sex with another partner, you have the safer-sex conversation.'" —Denise Langone

Be considerate. Be communicative. "When you date one person, you think, How are my choices going to affect this one person? But in polyamory it's How are my choices going to affect my partner, but also his wife? If I'm going on a vacation and want my partner to come with me, that's time away from his wife, so I want to be respectful of her and talk to her about it. None of it feels like a bother. It's just being courteous to one another." —Denise Langone

A man and woman in their 70s had an appointment with a sex therapist. "What can I do for you?" they were asked.

The man replied, "Would you watch us have sex?" The therapist was puzzled but agreed, setting his fee at $50. After the couple finished and got dressed, the therapist assured them, "There's nothing wrong with the way you two have sex."

So the couple came back several more times, made love as the therapist watched and were told there was nothing amiss. Then they paid him and left. But when the couple arrived for a fifth appointment, the therapist grew very curious. "What exactly are you trying to find out?" he asked.

"We're not trying to find out anything," the man responded. "Jessica's married, so we can't go to her house, and I'm married, so we can't go to mine. The Holiday Inn charges $90, and the Hilton charges $120. We have sex here for $50, and I get $35 back from Medicare."

If only the Pilgrims had killed a cat instead of a turkey, we would all be eating pussy on Thanksgiving.

A blonde walked into the library, stepped up to the counter and slammed a book down. "This is the worst book I've ever read!" she screamed at the librarian. "It has no plot and far too many characters!"

The librarian looked up and calmy remarked, "So you're the one who stole our phone book."

A wise man once said, "You should treat your woman like a vacuum cleaner. When she stops sucking, replace the fucking bag!"

Joe walked into a pharmacy and began wandering up and down the aisles. A salesgirl noticed him and asked if she could help. "I'm looking for a box of tampons for my wife," Joe said, and the young lady directed him to the correct aisle.

A few minutes later Joe plopped a huge bag of cotton balls and a ball of string on the counter. "Sir, I thought you were looking for some tampons for your wife," the confused salesgirl said.

Joe explained, "You see, it's like this. Yesterday I sent my wife to the store to get me a carton of cigarettes, and she came back with a tin of tobacco and a pack of rolling papers 'cause they were soooooo much cheaper. So I figure, if I have to roll my own, so does she."

Question: What happened when a lonely bachelor took out a classified ad reading "Wife Wanted"?

Answer: The next day he received over 200,000 responses saying "Take mine!"

A young man's new girlfriend invited him to dinner at her house. On the way she told him about an odd family custom: The first person to speak after dinner had to do the dishes.

The couple sat down with the girl's parents, and after they'd finished eating, everyone remained silent. Not wanting to do the dishes, the young fella tried to elicit a comment by kissing his girlfriend full on the mouth. No one uttered a word, so he began to rub her tits. Still no one said anything.

Pulling out all the stops, the desperate young man stripped his girlfriend naked and fucked her right on the table. And still no one spoke. He then stripped the chick's mother naked and fucked her on the table. Not a peep from anyone.

Now certain that no one in the family was going to speak, the young man resigned himself to clearing the table. But when he picked up the butter tray, his girlfriend's father jumped up and shouted, "Okay! Okay! I'll do the fucking dishes!"

THE FEMALE RE
BLOW

HUSTLER: You first became famous for being that guy on roller skates.
NICK SWARDSON: Oh, God, tell me about it.

Looking back at Reno 911!, there was some lightning in a bottle with that cast. You ever gonna dust off your cutoff shorts and roll the streets of Reno again?
We did have an amazing group. I'm so lucky and thankful for that. I think I've heard rumblings, but nothing concrete. Everyone's schedules are insane. There were kinda talks of doing another movie, but I can't fit into any of those outfits anymore. I don't even know where my roller skates are.

So hardcore fans should be sending you some roller skates if they want that to happen.
[Laughs.] Yeah, man.

What was it like having Paul Reubens play your dad on Reno?
Pretty epic. I grew up on Pee-wee's Playhouse. It was awesome—he's such a great man. And he still sends me a Christmas card every year.

After Reno there was an explosion of work for you with Happy Madison Productions.
Yes, it changed my life in a lot of ways. Adam Sandler became one of my best friends; he's like a brother to me. Adam saw me on Comedy Central and said, "I have this movie Grandma's Boy. We need somebody to rewrite it." I had just written Malibu's Most Wanted, and he told me, "Make it crazy, rated R. Write yourself into the movie." He just got my sensibility, which was based on his, because I grew up watching him. So it was an easy fit, ya know? Ever since then I've worked with him nonstop. I remember, when I first started with him, he said, "I'm gonna show you how to make a movie, every aspect of it." It was pretty huge.

Since then you've become so close, you've even gone out on the road together for live work.
Yeah, we were on tour in April and June.

Is there any particular advantage to that versus the studio work?
We all get along really well, so it's fun to hang out. I mean, when we hang out, there's no hierarchy or anything. We're just telling each other to fuck off. When you're filming, it's a lot more intense. The hours are long; there's more pressure. But when we go out on the road now, it's like we can actually hang out, go to dinner and fuck off, ya know? We only have to work for an hour a night.

Let's talk about Ridiculous 6, another Sandler production. You guys shot that in New Mexico, right?
Sante Fe, which is amazing, by the way. I miss Sante Fe.

There's a scene where you and the members of your gang are buried up to your necks. Was that a real live crow pecking at your head?
No, it was CGI. That scene fucking sucked. [Laughs.] I'm like really claustrophobic, so it was uncomfortable for me. They were all, "Are you cool with this?" And I remember just thinking, Awwww, fuck. They told us we were gonna be in there for something like 45 minutes, so of course we all agreed. It ended up being four hours. During the last take, a sandstorm swept up, and we were all trapped, and there was sand blowing in our eyes. The crew ran off and were hiding, and we were stuck there. Me and [Will] Forte and fucking [Steve] Zahn, we were just screaming, and sand was going into our mouths and eyes. I'll never forget that.

It's such a light moment in the film too.
Oh, and another thing: We all figured, it's Sante Fe; it's desert, so ya know, heat. But it was cold as shit. Nobody was prepared at all. It was a fucking nightmare. We all ended up spending thousands of dollars at the local REI—like cartoonish amounts of money—because nobody was prepared.

"I HAD TO EXPLAIN THAT GAY ROBOT'S PRO-GAY. HE'S PROUD OF BEING GAY. HIS FRIENDS SUPPORT HIM; IT'S A POSITIVE THING. THE GUY WAS LIKE, 'OH, OKAY.' THEN HE WAS LIKE, 'DO YOU WANNA FUCK?'"

So Ridiculous 6 put that REI into the black for the quarter.
Plus that cast was just stacked, so every day there were famous people walking in there. The employees must've been freaked out.

Your movie Bucky Larson: Born to Be a Star is about a guy who starts out very sweet and ends up making porn. How do you think Bucky Larson would react to being in HUSTLER?
I think it would be very intense for him. Very intense. I love Bucky Larson; it's truly one of my favorite things on the planet. It's so funny—it was so destroyed. Critics, everybody just hated it. With comedy you go out to bring people enjoyment, and when you receive so much hate, it's a weird phenomenon. You're trying to make people laugh, and people are like, "Fuck you! You're a piece of shit. This fucking thing sucks!" We didn't set out to hurt anybody. Like why am I getting death threats? It's subjective, man. I mean, that cast is fucking Don Johnson, Christina Ricci and Stephen Dorff; these are fucking great actors! [Chuckles.] It's clearly not a piece of shit. You can not laugh if you want. It's not a bad movie. Good people, great crew.

What was your takeaway from those internet pussies dogpiling on Bucky?
There was no major takeaway. It's like Kevin Smith said—and I'm paraphrasing—he fired back, "If you're going to shit on us, make your own fucking movie." Throw your hat in the ring. I mean, what the fuck.

Around that same time you had a success with Pretend Time. You've gone on the record about the monstrous workload that show entailed. Would you ever consider returning to it as a one-off special?

The next special I do is gonna be half stand-up and half sketch. Because I do love sketch. There will be elements of Pretend Time in my next special.

When I was shooting Pretend Time, Bob Odenkirk, who is a friend and mentor of mine, looked at our production schedule and was like, "I can't believe you're doing this on your own!" He told me, "At least I had David [Cross]." He couldn't believe that I was taking on an entire sketch show. And it really was hard—I mean, hard in a Hollywood way. It wasn't hard compared to other jobs that are hard hard. But it was gnarly, because I never knew what the fuck was happening. Tons of wigs, insane locations.... It's so nice to play a consistent character right now. A relief.

Even between seasons, it seemed like you were still exhausted in interviews.

Oh, there was no downtime. I quit stand-up. I didn't do stand-up for a year and a half, because it was that intense. Preproduction, postproduction, it never ended. When you're the star of a sketch show, it's nonstop. We would have about eight to ten sketches an episode. Each one had different locations, different characters and different wardrobe—and I would have to answer for everything. I'm exhausted thinking about it right now. >>

SPECIAL THANKS TO CALI CARTER FOR MAKING NICK—AND ALL OF US—FEEL 100% BETTER.

Do you think that we will ever see Wheelchair Cat again?

I do miss a lot of the characters, I really do. Wheelchair Cat was amazing; my buddy wrote that one. So weird. Some of the stuff we did was nuts. People still come up to me and remind me of a sketch, and I'm like, "Oh, yeah, how the fuck did we get away with that?" It was just mayhem.

It sounds like you and Comedy Central got along in that regard. Pretend Time didn't have the same sour ending as something like Chappelle's Show.

I made that a point when I pitched the show. I told them it was going to be really aggressive, and they kinda went, "All right. Cool."

With all the LGBTQ issues in the news, it's kind of surprising that Gay Robot isn't currently a thing. You caught some flak for creating that, right? That character seems like it was ahead of its time.

Yeah, it was way ahead of its time. It's crazy, because I was at a gay bar—in Sante Fe actually—and this bartender laid into me, and I had to explain that Gay Robot's pro-gay. He's proud of being gay. His friends support him; it's a positive thing. The guy was like, "Oh, okay." Then he was like, "Do you wanna fuck?" Which was amazing, because he was just lecturing me about how all Gay Robot wanted to do was have sex. Funny.

With your most recent Comedy Central project, Typical Rick, you've taken a departure from the typical Swardson character. You're more of a straight man—not partying your face off.

With this show I really wanted to make an effort to not be the party guy. It's been refreshing. I've played so many crazy fucking characters, which I loved. They're all fun. But nobody ever saw me as an actor. I was always seen as the crazy guy. I wanted to not be the crazy guy for once, to show that I can actually be a fucking actor and play it straight. That's been a big bonus of Typical Rick.

That project has you playing a schlub from Iowa named Gary who thinks he's going to make it big in the L.A. acting scene. Any advice for the real-life Garys of Los Angeles?

God, people ask me for advice about what to do, and I always just tell them not to do it. Like when people say to me, "I'm thinking about getting into comedy," my response is, "Don't." That's always my advice. It's just a life that's so bizarre. It's such a hard business. I went through so much shit, and everybody I know has gone through so much shit that I don't wish it upon anyone. So really my advice would be, "Gary, stay home."

You mentioned writing earlier, for Grandma's Boy and Malibu's Most Wanted. What's your writing process like?

Writing is the hardest, funnest thing on Earth, truly. I mean, it's insanely frustrating, but it's awesome to have creative freedom, so I'm lucky. But, yeah, it can suck. I'm writing a script right now, and there are these times where you'll hit a wall. And you just have to wait to get to this breakthrough of a character or a premise. I'm writing the first act right now, and I finally just got over this fucking act break. It took me about eight months just to get through that key opening part of the movie. Eight months in my brain of just, Okay, how does this character advance? How does this guy get through that? There's no rhyme or reason to it. You just have to wait it out. You have to suck it up.

You've written a lot of stand-up routines and scripts that have been rooted in your personal life. Do you have a Minnesota epic you'd like to make someday?
I do! It's funny you bring that up. I was just talking to somebody about that the other day. Yeah, I had a movie that was being set up—it was a hometown, Saint Paul movie based on the Winter Carnival, which is a major thing in Saint Paul. I would like to make that happen at some point. But this producer guy royally flaked on me. Yeah, that's the nature of the business too, another thing you have to deal with: shit just not happening.

There's a new stand-up scene that's been building up in Minneapolis, including a recent comedy fest called 10,000 Laughs.
I'm so out of the loop. I still do the Acme open mic, stuff like that. But it's a whole different world now. I do go back though. I go to Vikings games. When you're in comedy this long—I'm at 21 years—you're fucking over it. The last thing you wanna do is hang out at comedy clubs. By this point, when I go back, I'm like fucking Betty White.

What's it gonna take for the Vikings to win NFC North this season?
God, I mean, any Vikings talk is like opening up a can of worms. I'm so close to them—to the players and the front office. It's intense. It just sucks, because when we were 5-0, I canceled shows Super Bowl weekend because I thought we were gonna go. I called my agent: "We gotta cancel these shows." He was like, "What do you mean?" Without hesitation I said, "Pull out. The Vikings are gonna go to the Super Bowl." My agent was all, "Are you fucking kidding me?!" I wouldn't budge. And right away we started losing. [Laughs.] I was like, "Fuck. Motherfucker."

"WRITING IS THE HARDEST, FUNNEST THING ON EARTH, TRULY... THERE'S NO RHYME OR REASON TO IT. YOU JUST HAVE TO WAIT IT OUT. YOU HAVE TO SUCK IT UP."

Sounds like you'd do it again if you had the chance.
Dude, of course. It's the Vikings. H

ZIGGY STAR & JOJO KISS

SKYLAR MADISON

CHERRY POP

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: BOBBY MANILA. STARRING: JOJO KISS, ZIGGY STAR, SKYLAR MADISON, ALYSSA COLE, TIFFANY WATSON, CHLOE COUTURE, RYAN DRILLER, DERRICK PIERCE, TOMMY PISTOL & JOHN STRONG.

Watching porn chicks pretend to be virgins is a little like seeing John Goodman take on the lead role in The Kate Moss Story. Luckily, Cherry Pop is juicy enough to overcome the wary jerkoff's skepticism. Doe-eyed brunette Jojo Kiss and Ziggy Star kick things off on a set that's half teenage girl's bedroom, half jail cell. Kiss, the more worldly of the two, plays masturbation mentor to the supposedly chaste Star, schooling her on the finer points of clam-cuddling. A quick study, Star works Kiss's big toe into her cooch, then sucks it clean of pussy juice before the two tear into a feverish twat-fiddling session. Stood up by a guy who was scheduled to pound the virginity out of her, blonde Skylar Madison pours her heart out to a bartender before going bottoms up for his stiff one. Fresh-faced, tiny blonde Alyssa Cole gets into a bit of stirrup trouble at her gynecologist's office. Cole plunges his meat thermometer into her mouth, then rubs her clit furiously as she pounds her puss on his probe. Tiffany Watson, a vibrant blonde with perfectly pear-shape tits and long, lean stems, puts in a particularly athletic performance, literally bending over backward while working her man's blood bone down her gullet. Cherry Pop strains the bounds of credulity, but will definitely have the viewer popping good and hard. AXEL BRAUN'S ASIAN CONNECTION

WICKED PICTURES. DIRECTOR: AXEL BRAUN. STARRING: MARICA HASE, ARIKA LANE, MIA LI, JAYDEN LEE, CINDY STARFALL, OWEN GRAY, SMALL HANDS, RYAN MCLANE, ERIC JOHN & MR. PETE.

Japan might be the Land of the Rising Sun, but for many viewers Axel Braun's Asian Connection will be the Wasteland of the Waning Hard-On. To be fair, this video starts off promisingly enough. With her blunt-cut bangs and damaged-in-genue appearance, Japanese sexpot Marica Hase is appealing enough; she looks like a naif who wanders into the Hot Topic at your local mall, pondering which items to shoplift. Unfortunately, she's hooked up with a semi-homeless-looking dude who bears a rather distracting anatomical anomaly. It's not often that I concern myself with the junk of porn actors, but this guy has two reddish indentations marking his meat mushroom. It's probably the result of a recently removed piercing, but the twin divots make it look like his dick lost a standoff with a rattlesnake. The wand wounds notwithstanding, Hase happily yip-yaps away as he bombs her pearl harbor. Elsewhere Arika Lane, with her veiny, surgically swollen tits and what appear to be cheek implants, makes the viewer wonder what lab she escaped from before performing her scene. Lane is appropriately paired with an inked-up chump who looks like he ditched his community service gig picking up trash on the side of the freeway to collect a little cash working a porn flick. The wise pud-puller might want to pull out of this Asian Connection. —P.D.R.

PUMP MY ASS FULL OF CUM 4

JULES JORDAN VIDEO. DIRECTOR: JULES JORDAN. STARRING: VICKI CHASE, KEISHA GREY, MEGAN RAIN, HOLLY HENDRIX, JAMES DEEN, MARKUS DUPREE, STEVE HOLMES, JOHN STRONG, CHRIS STROKES & JULES JORDAN.

For those who might worry that Pump My Ass Full of Cum 4 lacks the nuance of its predecessors, rest assured—the performances here are fully fleshed out. The first course of this sumptuous meal consists of Vicki Chase, a lithe brunette of indeterminate origin—her facial features suggest she's the product of a U.N. experiment to create an ideal global citizen. Chase has an ass that wouldn't quit if you took away its benefits and ordered it to work on weekends with no overtime. She drops her drawers to reveal that her sphincters have been primed by a butt plug, which her nether cheeks spit out like a baby rejecting a pacifier in favor of something more satisfying. And she gets that something in spades. Chase takes on a trio of dongs, the spittle collecting on her chin as she unlocks her jaw python-style to take them in simultaneously. A hearty round of double penetration ensues, culminating in a double-anal, with the two sticks rubbing together like they're literally trying to light a fire under her ass. Her brown-eye gapes so wide, you can practically hear the whispers of bad decisions whistling through it. By scene's end, Chase's hungry turd-cutter resembles a glazed Cinnabon, and she farts out the dribbly loads with the casual satisfaction of an overstuffed glutton letting one rip after a hearty meal. Pump My Ass Full of Cum 4 leaves colons brimming and ball sacs drained. —P.D.R.

Beauty is subjective. It's different for everyone. I believe wearing minimal or no makeup, embracing my natural tan and showing my natural features is beautiful. I hate being dolled up! I am confident and love myself completely. I don't need makeup or sexy clothes to make me feel 'hot.' Sometimes I even prefer wearing glasses. I love being a nerd or a schoolgirl!

BEAVER HUNT

EDITED BY MORGEN "TEX" HAGEN

NAOMI BENNET

Since November 1 is Larry Flynt's birthday, we're starting off with Naomi Bennet, 25, from Žatec, Czech Republic. Her beauty and bravado were sufficient reasons, but she happens to live in the homeland of Miloš Forman. Besides One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Amadeus and Man on the Moon, the Oscar-winner directed the must-see flick about our publisher's life and battles. Naomi has one forgivable shortcoming. The 5-foot-9 eye-catcher doesn't speak English, so Google Translate was required to convey her thoughts: "I first heard about HUSTLER while taking a cinema course in college. We learned about influential Czech filmmakers, and The People vs. Larry Flynt was one of the movies we watched. I decided that I wanted to be in his magazine. I'm not shy. I want the whole world to see me naked, not just the people who might have seen me skinny-dipping in the Eger River. My hobbies are skiing, cycling and working out. I'm bi, and I love having sex with a man and another girl at the same time. I get off on being overwhelmed."

—Photos by Omnia Productions

"My town is known for growing hops, which give beer its flavor. Now you know why I want to have sex in a brewery."

MIA

This "fun, loving and bubbly" Los Angeles native was once a server at a pizza parlor and a hostess at a Mexican restaurant. Leaving Southern California behind, Mia, 32, now greets prospective customers in the parlor of northern Nevada's Moonlite BunnyRanch, where the 5-foot-5 legal courtesan is a "very adventurous" hostess for those welcomed into her bedroom. Here's a peek at Mia's personal menu: "My hobbies are cooking, baking, dancing, ice-skating and rollerblading, and I enjoy listening to Esthero, Beyoncé and classic R&B music. I'm bi, and I love sex. I can have sex all day, and my best position is doggy-style, but I'm always open to trying new things. I do everything I can to please my partners, especially when giving a blowjob. I'm really good. It makes me feel super-sexy when I have a cock in my mouth." As the holiday season approaches, Mia fesses up, "I like to lie under the Christmas tree wearing a ribbon—and only a ribbon! And I make gingerbread cookies shaped into titties and cocks. Is that bad?" —Photos by Friend

"My fantasy is putting on a sex show for a few people. That would be so exciting!"

RAVEN SWALLOWZ

Here's a registered nurse who was born and still resides in Columbus, Ohio, HUSTLER's birthplace. "I began modeling part-time more than 25 years ago," Raven Swallowz, 47, recalls. "Somehow I slowly progressed from glamour, pinup and bikini shoots to artistic nude modeling and then explicit erotic photos and videos. Along the way I've gained a very large internet following. Being a new cam model has made me even more popular!" The 5-foot-4 Buckeye Stater, a proud graduate of The Ohio State University, has a bevy of pastimes. "When I'm not working," Raven elaborates, "I love to travel, work out, read science fiction, watch superhero movies and shop. I'm a shoe addict and have well over 250 pairs, so shopping and sex are my Olympic sports. My name implies a bit about my hardcore niche. I love to suck cock, and I have plenty of fans who enjoy seeing a mature ebony woman giving head and getting a cum facial." As for sexual fantasies, Raven is going to "leave everyone guessing," but she does have her fingers crossed: "If I'm really lucky, maybe I'll become a HUSTLER Honey in the future. My 51,000 Twitter followers would sure love to see that happen." Raven says so long for now with her signature sign-off: "Hugs, kisses and blowjobs!" —Photos by Oh Boy Photography

CAITLYN BROOKS

"What girl doesn't like to feel sexy?" asks Caitlyn Brooks, 25, a college student and cam model from San Diego, California. "Nothing makes me feel sexier than getting naked, and knowing that other people will enjoy it as much as I do is a huge bonus." The 5-foot-2 newbie adds, "In bed I'm a submissive princess most of the time, but I can also be a pretty bratty domme. One day a guy can get a shy, playful me; the next I'm practically begging for it." Caitlyn is a "superbusy" Beaver. "Outside the bedroom I take pole-dancing and antigravity fitness classes as a sexual outlet," she explains. "Getting sweaty at the gym is a real turn-on. But I'm a big nerd when it comes to my other interests—Doctor Who, old-school Adam Sandler movies, romantic comedies, playing musical instruments and curling up with a book." Caitlyn does have one risqué hobby: "I love taking no-panties-on road trips, driving with the windows down and Blink-182 shaking the car!" —Photos by Paradise Bound Productions

BELLA DIVINITY

As you can see, Bella Divinity, 34, adores being bare-ass naked in the great outdoors, but that's merely one of her kicks. Others include softball, dancing and watching her favorite boob-tube shows—Schitt's Creek, F Is for Family and Ghost Adventures. As the 5-foot-6 denizen of Carson City, Nevada, reveals, "I'm a girl who likes to laugh, have sex and search for the unexplainable—always after a thrill and eager to please." Bella is thrilled to be au naturel in HUSTLER: "Larry Flynt is amazing. He gives us women a place to express our sexuality, personality and physical beauty. But it's not only about the exposure; there's also the wonderful people I may actually get to meet at Love Ranch North." Bella, a former medical technician, is a courtesan at the legal cathouse just outside Carson City, and she fancies meeting and pleasing lots of HUSTLER readers. "I'm very sensual, caring and enthusiastic," Bella touts, "and I have a special talent: No one can talk dirty like me. I have a wild imagination, and I let it take charge in bed or my favorite place to have sex, outdoors." —Photos by Friend

"My fantasy is going with a man to Pyramid Lake. First we run around the beach naked and set off fireworks. Then we use a waterproof camera to make a video of us having sex in the water."

THE EROTIC REVIEW
WORLDS BEST REVIEW PLATFORM FOR ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
I made my way down kissing her neck, erect nipples, belly and then to her feminine flower that was already dripping wet and hot.
Clean, smooth, tasty with perfect small delicate petals. My favorite kind of flower to dine on. And I did and loved it.

BIG MELONS

HUSTLER CLASSIC
OCTOBER 1984
PHOTOGRAPHY BY JAMES BAES

Some hungry men like cantaloupes; others prefer casabas. But the true gourmet knows that watermelons are the biggest taste treat of all. Just licking their sweet pink insides and feeling the warm juice run down your chin is enough to bring a smile to any man's face. And they're nutritious too. Do you know that watermelons offer large quantities of vitamins A and C? That the average wedge of watermelon has only 42 calories? Do you care? No, of course not. We know what you're really looking at in these pictures: the sensational pair of melons. Everything else is just window dressing. But be careful where you spurt your seeds—you don't want to get the magazine sticky.

THE DECEMBER ISSUE GOES ON SALE SEPTEMBER 26, 2017 | VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT HUSTLERMAGAZINE.COM

JIM NORTON

There's pretty much nothing this man won't say or do for a laugh. Fresh off his Netflix special Mouthful of Shame and an ass-whipping by Robert De Niro, the hilarious Norton regales us with stories about tranny girls, the art of cunnilingus and the upside of bombing onstage.

REVERSE COWBOY

Journalist Ian Murphy explores America's poverty-making policies and backward solutions to social problems, from Reagan's trickle-down bullshit to the Trump Administration's push to outlaw abortion and its new War on Drugs. This incisive, hard-hitting exposé is a must-read. Photo by Bart Pro/Alamy.

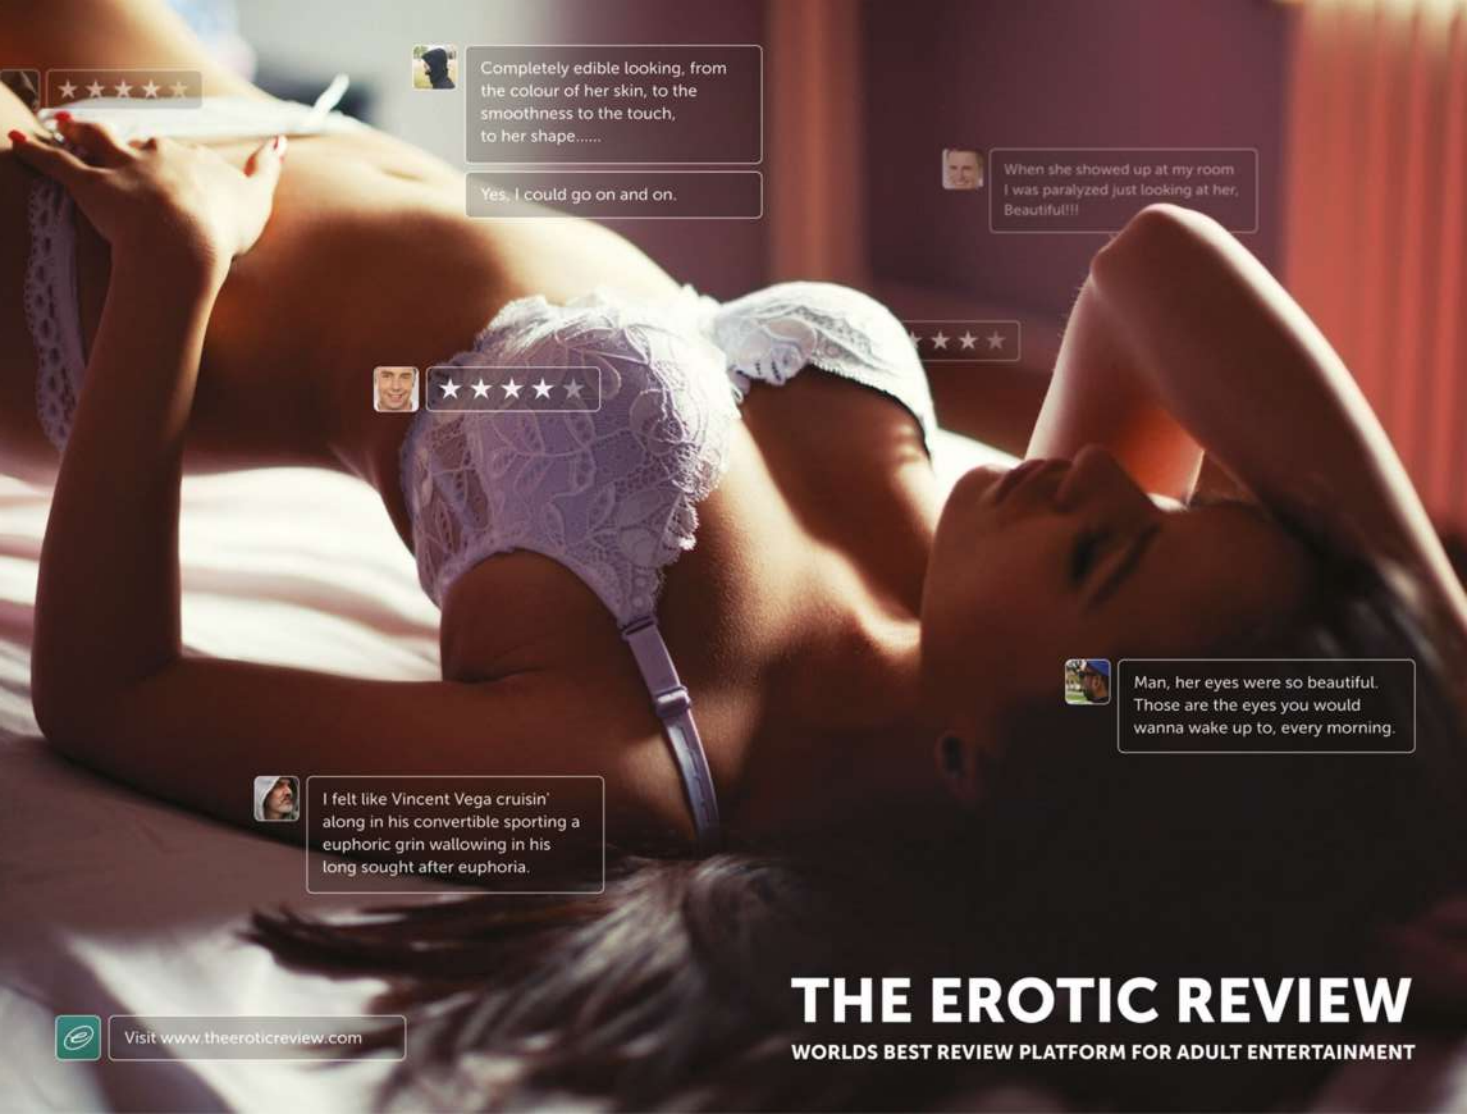

BJ ACADEMY

School's in session, and the bad girls in class will do anything to avoid detention. If that means blowing the math teacher, then he better give his teacher's pets an A+…and a faceful of cum. Starring Cleo Vixen, Natasha Starr, Dahlia Sky, Kiley Jay and Kat Monroe.

Completely edible looking, from the colour of her skin, to the smoothness to the touch, to her shape.....
Yes, I could go on and on.
When she showed up at my room I was paralyzed just looking at her, Beautiful!!!
Man, her eyes were so beautiful. Those are the eyes you would wanna wake up to, every morning.
I felt like Vincent Vega cruisin' along in his convertible sporting a euphoric grin wallowing in his long sought after euphoria.
